NEW QUESTION: 1

HOTSPOT

Answer:

Explanation:

Box 1, Storage controller: SCSI

Storage Spaces requirements include:

- * Serial ATA (SATA) or Serial Attached SCSI (SAS) connected disks, optionally in a just-a-bunch-of-disks (JBOD) enclosure Note: RAID adapters, if used, must have all RAID functionality disabled

Box 2, Storage volume type:

- * Storage pools. A collection of physical disks that enable you to aggregate disks, expand capacity in a flexible manner, and delegate administration.

- * Storage spaces. Virtual disks created from free space in a storage pool. Storage spaces have such attributes as resiliency level, storage tiers, fixed provisioning, and precise administrative control.

NEW QUESTION: 2

Your company has been using Terraform Cloud for a some time now . But every team is creating their own modules , and there is no standardization of the modules , with each team creating the resources in their own unique way . You want to enforce a standardization of the modules across the enterprise . What should be your approach.

- A. Upgrade to Terraform enterprise , since this is not possible in terraform cloud.
- B. Create individual workspaces for each team , and ask them to share modules across workspaces.
- C. Implement a Private module registry in Terraform cloud , and ask teams to reference them.
- D. Upload the modules in the terraform public module registry , and ask teams to reference them

Answer: C

Explanation:

Terraform Cloud's private module registry helps you share Terraform modules across your organization. It includes support for module versioning, a searchable and filterable list of available modules, and a configuration designer to help you build new workspaces faster. By design, the private module registry works much like the public Terraform Registry. If you're already used the public registry, Terraform Cloud's registry will feel familiar. Understand the different offerings in Terraform OS, Terraform Cloud and Terraform Enterprise. Terraform Cloud's private module registry helps you share Terraform modules across your organization.
