NEW QUESTION: 1

Refer to the exhibit. An engineer is using XML in an application to send information to a RESTCONF-enabled device. After sending the request, the engineer gets this response message and a HTTP response code of 400. What do these responses tell the engineer?

- A. The Accept header sent was application/xml
- B. JSON body was used
- C. POST was used instead of PUT to update
- D. The Content-Type header sent was application/xml.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

Accept and Content-type are both headers sent from a client (a browser) to a service. Accept header is a way for a client to specify the media type of the response content it is expecting and Content-type is a way to specify the media type of request being sent from the client to the server.

The response was sent in XML so we can say the Accept header sent was application/xml.
