NEW QUESTION: 4

You have a computer that runs Windows 7.

You install Windows XP in a new partition on the computer and discover that you can no longer start Windows 7.

You need to start Windows 7 in the minimum amount of time.

What should you do?

- A. Start the computer from the Windows 7 installation media and run Startup Repair.
- B. From Windows XP Recovery Console, run the Fixboot command.
- C. Start the computer from the Windows 7 installation media and select Install now.
- D. From Windows XP, modify the default path in the boot.ini file.

Answer: A

Explanation:

When configuring a new computer to boot between multiple operating systems, it is also necessary to install operating systems in the order that they were released. For example, if you want to boot between Windows XP and Windows 7 on a new computer, you need to install Windows XP before you install Windows 7. If you install Windows XP after Windows 7, the Windows XP installation routine cannot recognize the Windows 7 operating system installation and the computer only boots into Windows XP. It is possible to repair the computer from this point using Windows 7 startup repair so that it dual-boots, but the simplest course of action is just to install the operating systems in the order in which they were released
