DC02 is in New York site, which does not have a DHCP server, and it is a domain controller (which is required).

Not RAS01 as it is not a domain controller.

Not DC4 or RAS02 as they are located in Chicago, and the Chicago site already has a DHCP server.

Box 2: Host standby.

In Host standby mode only one of the servers actively leases IP addresses.

Not Load-Balanced as in this mode both DHCP servers answer client request, but according to scenario only one DHCP Server in each site must lease IP addresses at a given time.

For automatic state switchover to happen from communication interrupt to partner down state, you need to enable state switchover interval. If you don't do that then you would need to manually transition primary server to partner down mode.
