NEW QUESTION: 1

Which branching strategy should you recommend for the investment planning applications suite?

- A. development isolation
- B. feature isolation
- C. release isolation
- D. main only

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

Scenario: A branching strategy that supports developing new functionality in isolation must be used.

Feature isolation is a special derivation of the development isolation, allowing you to branch one or more feature branches from main, as shown, or from your dev branches.

When you need to work on a particular feature, it might be a good idea to create a feature branch.
