- B. Option B
- C. Option C
- D. Option A

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 3

You notice a performance change in your production Oracle database and you want to know which change has made this performance difference.

You generate the Compare Period Automatic Database Diagnostic Monitor (ADDM) report to further investigation.

Which three findings would you get from the report?

- A. It detects any configuration change that caused a performance difference in both time periods.
- B. It detects the top wait events causing performance degradation.
- C. It shows the difference in the size of memory pools in both time periods.
- D. It shows the resource usage for CPU, memory, and I/O in both time periods.
- E. It identifies any workload change that caused a performance difference in both time periods.
- F. It gives information about statistics collection in both time periods.

Answer: A,D,E

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Keyword: shows the difference.

* Full ADDM analysis across two AWR snapshot periods

Detects causes, measure effects, then correlates them

Causes: workload changes, configuration changes

Effects: regressed SQL, reach resource limits (CPU, I/O, memory, interconnect) Makes actionable recommendations along with quantified impact

* Identify what changed

/Configuration changes, workload changes

* Performance degradation of the database occurs when your database was performing optimally in the past, such as 6 months ago, but has gradually degraded to a point where it becomes noticeable to the users. The Automatic Workload Repository (AWR) Compare Periods report enables you to compare database performance between two periods of time.

While an AWR report shows AWR data between two snapshots (or two points in time), the AWR Compare Periods report shows the difference (ABE) between two periods (or two AWR reports with a total of four snapshots). Using the AWR Compare Periods report helps you to identify detailed performance attributes and configuration settings that differ between two time periods.

At which time can the report package owner choose to initiate a review instance?

- A. at any time
- B. never -- only the Admin may initiate a review instance
- C. when the Author Phase is completed
- D. when the Author Phase is Approved

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation: The report package owner can choose to initiate a review instance at any time. Oracle Enterprise Performance Reporting Cloud does not require the author phase to be in a completed status. Once the first review cycle is initiated, the report package status changes to "Under Review".
