NEW QUESTION: 1

A customer has 10 volumes within a storage group. Each volume has 14 hosts granted access via separate basic access point lists. The customer needs to bring online an additional three systems that require the same access. The customer needs to add the new servers and grant access to the 10 storage group volumes according to Dell-recommended best practices. Which workflow should the customer follow to meet the requirements?

- A. Create a new volume folder and place all volumes within the volume folder. Select the volume folder and add the basic access point policy to the volumes.
- B. Create a new access policy to update only new server information. Apply the access policy to each volume individually.
- C. Create an access policy to update all host information. Apply the policy to a new access policy group.
Apply the access group policy to all volumes.
- D. Create a new basic access point for each new member and apply to each volume individually.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

An access policy consists of a set of extended access points.

An access policy group is a set of access policies that can be associated to a volume. When an access policy group is associated with a volume, all endpoints described within those access policies have access to the volume.
