NEW QUESTION: 3
Which of the following types of attack is described in the statement below? "It is a technique employed to compromise the security of network switches. In this attack, a switch is flooded with packets, each containing different source MAC addresses. The intention is to consume the limited memory set aside in the switch to store the MAC address-to-physical port translation table."
A. MAC flooding
B. Blind spoofing
C. Man-in-the-middle
D. Dictionary
Answer: A
Explanation:
MAC flooding is a technique employed to compromise the security of network switches. In a typical MAC flooding attack, a switch is flooded with packets, each containing different source MAC addresses. The intention is to consume the limited memory set aside in the switch to store the MAC address-to-physical port translation table. The result of this attack causes the switch to enter a state called failopen mode, in which all incoming packets are broadcast out on all ports (as with a hub), instead of just down the correct port as per normal operation. A malicious user could then use a packet sniffer (such as Wireshark) running in promiscuous mode to capture sensitive data from other computers (such as unencrypted passwords, e-mail and instant messaging conversations), which would not be accessible were the switch operating normally.
Answer B is incorrect. Blind spoofing is a type of IP spoofing attack. This attack occurs when the attacker is on a different subnet as the destination host. Therefore, it is more difficult to obtain correct TCP sequence number and acknowledgement number of the data frames. In blind spoofing attack, an attacker sends several packets to the target computer so that he can easily obtain sequence number of each data frame. If the attacker is successful in compromising the sequence number of the data frames, the data is successfully sent to the target computer. Answer C is incorrect. Dictionary attack is a type of password guessing attack. This type of attack uses a dictionary of common words to find out the password of a user. It can also use common words in either upper or lower case to find a password. There are many programs available on the Internet to automate and execute dictionary attacks. Answer A is incorrect. Man-in-the-middle attacks occur when an attacker successfully inserts an intermediary software or program between two communicating hosts. The intermediary software or program allows attackers to listen to and modify the communication packets passing between the two hosts. The software intercepts the communication packets and then sends the information to the receiving host. The receiving host responds to the software, presuming it to be the legitimate client.
