NEW QUESTION: 1

You've created your first load balancer and have registered your EC2 instances with the load balancer.

Elastic Load Balancing routinely performs health checks on all the registered EC2 instances and automatically distributes all incoming requests to the DNS name of your load balancer across your registered, healthy EC2 instances. By default, the load balancer uses the ___ protocol for checking the health of your instances.

- A. IPv6
- B. ICMP
- C. HTTP
- D. HTTPS

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Elastic Load Balancing a health configuration uses information such as protocol, ping port, ping path (URL), response timeout period, and health check interval to determine the health state of the instances registered with the load balancer.

Currently, HTTP on port 80 is the default health check.

NEW QUESTION: 3

An Administrator of an IBM Security QRadar SIEM V7.2.8 deployment needs to exclude the mail servers from a custom rule.

How would the Administrator complete this task?

A. Create a building block that includes the IP addresses of all mail servers, use that building block in the custom rule, to exclude those hosts.

B. Create a custom rule. In the "Rule Response" section of the Rule Wizard, select the Trigger Scan option.

Add the mail server IP Addresses to the table and select exclude.

C. Create the custom rule. Create a Custom Action from the Admin Tab, to exclude the mail servers IP Addresses. In the "Rule Response" section of the Rule Wizard, select the Execute Custom Action option, selecting the appropriate Custom Action.

D. Create several rules excluding each mail server. Place these rules with the custom rule in a master rule, making sure the custom rule is last in the sequence.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

Building blocks use the same tests as rules, but have no actions associated with them. Building blocks group together commonly used tests, to build complex logic, so they can be used in rules. Building blocks are often configured to test groups of IP addresses, privileged usernames, or collections of event names. For example, you might create a building block that includes the IP addresses of all mail servers in your network, then use that building block in another rule, to exclude those hosts. The building block defaults are provided as guidelines, which should be reviewed and edited based on the needs of your network.
