NEW QUESTION: 1

How is Annualized Loss Expectancy (ALE) derived from a threat?

- A. AV x EF
- B. SLE/EF
- C. ARO x (SLE - EF)
- D. SLE x ARO

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

The Annualized Loss Expectancy (ALE) is the monetary loss that can be expected for an asset due to a risk over a one year period. It is defined as:

$$\text{ALE} = \text{SLE} * \text{ARO}$$

where SLE is the Single Loss Expectancy and ARO is the Annualized Rate of Occurrence.

Single loss expectancy is one instance of an expected loss if a specific vulnerability is exploited and how it affects a single asset. Asset Value × Exposure Factor = SLE.

The annualized rate of occurrence (ARO) is the value that represents the estimated frequency of a specific threat taking place within a 12-month timeframe.

Incorrect Answers:

A: ARO x (SLE - EF) is not the correct formula for calculating the Annualized Loss Expectancy (ALE).

C: SLE/EF is not the correct formula for calculating the Annualized Loss Expectancy (ALE).

D: AV x EF is not the correct formula for calculating the Annualized Loss Expectancy (ALE).
