Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 2

Which of the following characteristics of cables signifies the amount of digital data that the cable carries?

- A. Bandwidth
- B. Inference susceptibility
- C. Attenuation
- D. Crosstalk

Answer: A

Explanation:

Bandwidth (or digital bandwidth) is a measurement of how much data can be sent in a period of time. It is a data rate measured in bits. The standard unit of digital bandwidth is bits per second (bps). In radio communication, bandwidth (analogue bandwidth) is the range of frequencies occupied by the radio signals. The standard unit of analogue bandwidth is Hertz (Hz). Answer option B is incorrect. In physics, attenuation is the gradual loss in intensity of any kind of flux through a medium. For instance, sunlight is attenuated by dark glasses, X-rays are attenuated by lead, and light and sound are attenuated while passing through seawater. In electrical engineering and telecommunications, attenuation affects the propagation of waves and signals in electrical circuits, in optical fibers, as well as in air (radio waves). Answer option A is incorrect. Crosstalk is a disturbance caused by the electric or magnetic fields of one telecommunication signal affecting a signal in an adjacent circuit. Within network circuits it can occur due to electromagnetic interference (EMI). It can occur in microcircuits within computers and audio equipments as well. Answer option C is incorrect. Each type of cable is susceptible to some interference. This interference may be internal or external noise. These noises depend on the environment where the cable is to be laid. External noise may consist of Electromagnetic Interference (EMI) or Radio Frequency Interference (RFI). EMI (electromagnetic interference) is the disruption of operation of an electronic device when it is in the vicinity of an electromagnetic field (EM field) in the radio frequency (RF) spectrum that is caused by another electronic device. Shielded cables are less susceptible to interference than unshielded cables.
