NEW QUESTION: 1

You design a SQL Server 2008 Analysis Services (SSAS) solution. The data source view has tables as shown in the exhibit. (Click the Exhibit button.)

The FactInternetSales measure will be queried frequently based on the city and country of the customer. You need to design a cube that will provide optimal performance for queries.

Which design should you choose?

A. Create a dimension named Customer by joining the DimGeography and DimCustomer tables. Add an attribute relationship from CustomerKey to City and from CustomerKey to Country. Create a regular relationship in the cube between the Customer dimension and the FactInternetSales measure.

B. Create two dimensions named Customer and Geography from the DimCustomer table and the DimGeography table, respectively. Create an unmaterialized reference relationship between the Geography dimension and the FactInternetSales measure by using the Customer dimension as an intermediate dimension.

C. Create a dimension named Customer by joining the DimGeography and DimCustomer tables. Add an attribute relationship from CustomerKey to City and from City to Country. Create a regular relationship in the cube between the Customer dimension and the FactInternetSales measure.

D. Create two dimensions named Customer and Geography from the DimCustomer table and the DimGeography table, respectively. Create a materialized reference relationship between the Geography dimension and the FactInternetSales measure by using the Customer dimension as an intermediate dimension.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 2

Your company has an Active Directory domain that has an organizational unit named Sales. The Sales organizational unit contains two global security groups named sales managers and sales executives.

You need to apply desktop restrictions to the sales executives group.

You must not apply these desktop restrictions to the sales managers group.

You create a GPO named DesktopLockdown and link it to the Sales organizational unit.

What should you do next?

A. Configure the Deny Apply Group Policy permission for the sales managers on the DesktopLockdown GPO.

B. Configure the Allow Apply Group Policy permission for Authenticated Users on the DesktopLockdown GPO.

C. Configure the Deny Apply Group Policy permission for Authenticated Users on the DesktopLockdown GPO.

D. Configure the Deny Apply Group Policy permission for the sales executives on the DesktopLockdown GPO.

Answer: A

Explanation:

<http://support.microsoft.com/kb/816100> How to prevent domain Group Policies from applying to certain user or computer accounts Typically, if you want Group Policy to apply only to specific accounts (either user accounts, computer accounts, or both), you can put the accounts in an organizational unit, and then apply Group Policy at that organizational unit level.

However, there may be situations where you want to apply Group Policy to a whole domain, although you may not want those policy settings to also apply to administrator accounts or to other specific users or groups.

<http://www.grouppolicy.biz/2010/05/how-to-exclude-individual-users-or-computers-from-a-group-policy-object/> Best Practice: How to exclude individual users or computers from a Group Policy Object One of the common question I see on the forums from time to time is how to exclude a user and/or a computer from having a Group Policy Object (GPO) applied. This is a relatively straight forward process however I should stress this should be used sparingly and should always be done via group membership to avoid the administrative overhead of having to constantly update the security filtering on the GPO. Step 1. Open the Group Policy Object that you want to apply an exception and then click on the "Delegation" tab and then click on the "Advanced" button.

Step 2. Click on the "Add" button and select the group (recommended) that you want to exclude from having this policy applied.

Step 3. In this example I am excluding the "Users GPO Exceptions" group for this policy. Select this group in the "Group or user names" list and then scroll down the permission and tick the "Deny" option against the "Apply Group Policy" permission.

C:Documents and Settingsusernzw1Desktop1.PNG

Now any members of this "User GPO Exceptions" security group will not have this Group Policy Object applied. Having a security group to control this exception makes it much easier to control as someone only needs to modify the group membership of the group to makes changes to who (or what) get the policy applied. This makes the delegation of this task to level 1 or level 2 support much more practical as you don't need to grant them permission to the Group Policy Objects.
